What are your dreams for 2015, kindred spirits? I'm already working towards mine...

4:21 PM - 1 Jan 2015

19

Anne Shirley

@AnneWith_An_E

I think having dreams is just as important as resolutions. Dreams are more fantastical and resolutions more grounded, but that's okay.

4:22 PM - 1 Jan 2015

6 35

Anne Shirley

@AnneWith_An_E

And for me, they go hand in hand. Resolutions I make will be little steps to achieving my dreams. :)

4:23 PM - 1 Jan 2015

2 22

Anne Shirley

@AnneWith_An_E

Grief gets easier, and then it doesn't.

I am really blessed to have a lot of supportive friends around me, who help me cope with things- even just getting homework done or filling the silence.

But when I catch myself laughing at something Ruby says in the caf, or Di sends me a cute music video to watch- I feel guilty.

It's like I have a responsibility to be upset, and I am upset. Sometimes I'm just trapped in a feeling of emptiness, like there's nothing to be sad about but everything. And then we have a beautiful snowfall, or I see something that Matthew would have loved, and I feel inexplicably happy- and then I feel guilty about it because the world isn't supposed to be happy. The person who makes me happiest is gone.

I don't know what the answer is, because the person with the answers is gone.
